International Market Wrap

Wall Street doubled down on wagers the Federal Reserve will need to lift rates more aggressively, with stocks and bonds falling as inflation worries spurred fresh warnings from officials. A strong consumer price index fuelled bets on a quarter-point December Fed hike, with traders projecting some chance of a larger move. Treasury two-year yields jumped the most since April 2025. The S&P 500 halted back-to-back gains. The dollar rose. In late hours, CoreWeave gave a solid outlook, easing fears about the debt-laden business suffering a slowdown. Fed Governor Christopher Waller said a half-point December hike may be needed. That was followed by remarks from Dallas Fed President Lorie Logan, who backed at least two more quarter-point increases, adding those may be necessary at a quicker pace than officials have moved.

SA Economic News

South Africa's jobless rate edges higher in third quarter. South Africa's unemployment rate increased for a third straight quarter as jobs were shed in agriculture and from private households. The rate rose to 33.7% in the three months through September from 33.6% in the prior quarter, according to data released by Statistics South Africa in Pretoria on Tuesday. The number of unemployed people in Africa's largest economy now sits at 8.6 million as the nation navigates headwinds from the Middle East conflict which has entered its ninth month. The war triggered a surge in the price of oil, of which South Africa is a net importer, pushing local fuel prices to record levels and denting household budgets.
